HAILSTORM DOES SEVERE DAMAGE OVER WIDE AREA

Wipes Out Crops, Breaks Windows Northeast

Cutting a swath eight miles wide and nearly 100 miles long in a southerly direction from Didsbury, hail battered down crops and caused an estimated damage of over $50,000 on Saturday afternoon.

As 2.13 inches of rain, mixed with hail, fell in less than ten minutes, basements in the business section of Drumheller filled with stock, were flooded eight feet deep. In Knox Church basement, eight feet of water destroyed a piano which was found floating around. The motor of the costly pipe organ did not function on Sunday.

Many store proprietors, in order to salvage goods stored in the basements, waded chest deep to save valuables. The hail was reported as large as hen's eggs.

Some districts in the Brooks area also sustained heavy damage from hail.

Several thousand acres of wheat in the Three Hills, Swalwell, Twinning and Sun-slope areas were damaged by hail, and hundreds of dollars damage done to property. Old timers claim Saturday's storm was the worst in history.

Their Majesties Accept Hikers' Badges

A souvenirs of their hike to the summit of Tunnel Mountain during their visit to Banff. Their Majesties, King George and Queen Elizabeth, both graciously accepted the silver medallions of the Sky Line Trail Hikers of the Canadian Rockies. King George borrowed an abensock from the Sky Line Trail Hikers which he used for his walk. He was particularly delighted with the panorama of the Canadian Rockies at Banff from that point.

dent of this organization, the Parks Branch of the Canadian Government, has been asked to name the mountain the 'Summit of Tunnel Mountain' to be named after King George, and also to erect a lookout at a point known as the green spot on Stoney Squaw Mountain to be called Queen Elizabeth's Lookout. As a result, the members of the organization were particularly delighted with the panorama of the Canadian Rockies at Banff from that point.

Miss Crissie and Gordon Coutts who have been attending school here returned to their home Saturday.

PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT CFAC

CFAC Stampede Studio

Last week we gave you some news regarding the model studio CFAC has built for the Calgary Exhibition and Stampede. Well here we have some more.

From 1:45 right through until a quarter to six all the broadcasts will be made from the Exhibition grounds, as well as an hour, ten to eleven, in the evening. All the broadcasts will feature 'live talent'.

Harry Hall and his orchestra, dressed in their familiar range costumes, will be on the air every afternoon. They will play tunes that are familiar to the range, and the old barn dance, of course, no up-to-date cowboy or cowgirl would miss the latest 'jitterbug' numbers, so there will be some of those too.

Spike and Rex, better known as the Texas Pals, will be there, too, with their yodeling and singing. These boys are really father and son, and are Albertans ... their home was at Dog Pound. Five years ago they started touring as a singing team, and have covered a lot of territory since then. They have appeared on stage and radio programs in Vancouver, Moose Jaw, Kamloops, Seattle, Calgary, etc. You've heard them over CFAC Tuesday

Berl and Roy Dobson of Calgary arrived here Tuesday to spend their holidays with their grand parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. Otto.

Mr J E. Cooley motored to Calgary this week bringing back with him his son, Floyd.

The pupils of Mr. Charyk's room gathered Thursday evening in the School hall, where they played games, danced and served lunch. Before they dispersed they presented Mr. J. Charyk with an autograph album containing each of their autographs.

A Declining Industry?

The fact that the Dominion Bureau of Statistics has reported a decrease of $21,000,000 in 1938 in expenditures made in Canada by incoming tourists is something which should give pause for reflection and inquiry, in the hope that this falling off in national income on this account can be discovered and the remedy found.

Tourist traffic in Canada has become a national industry of great importance to the prosperity of the country in the past few years. While one or two years prior to the depression era higher figures were shown, the revenue to the people of this Dominion from this source has been steadily rising since 1932, reaching a post-depression peak of $294,682,000 in 1937 which, however, is still below the $309,379,000 of the record year of 1929. The following year, 1938, marked a recession of $21,000,000, the first, and it is to be hoped the last, decline since 1932.

What 1939 is to bring forth from this source is still in the lap of the gods, so far as the statisticians are concerned, but there seem to be some good reasons why the income lost in 1938 should be picked up and augmented.

Some Helpful Factors

In the first place, the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth drew thousands of Americans across the boundary to Canadian centres in May and June this year and this alone should go far towards balancing the differential between the 1937 and 1938 figures. Just about that time, and since, some improvement in business and economic conditions on both sides of the international boundary are reported, and this, in the ordinary course of events, should mean a material stimulus to this comparatively infant industry in Canada.

In some quarters it has been suggested that the condition of the roads in Canada, and particularly in the west, may have been partially responsible for the recent decline in the number of visitors from the United States, or at least in the amount of money they have spent here.

While there may be some truth in this diagnosis, it does not appear to be the major item in the reduction, since a break down of the figures indicates that the loss occasioned by a reduction in expenditures by tourists who came into Canada in 1938 by automobile is only approximately one million dollars.

While a reduction of one million dollars out of a total of $181,000,000 spent by tourists on wheels from the U.S. in 1937 is not a serious matter, if it is a trend in the wrong direction and there is some possibility that road conditions may partly be responsible. Moreover, had the increase from 1936 to 1937 been sustained in 1938, the income from American tourists on the road would have shown an increase of $22,000,000 instead of decline of a million, or sufficient to offset the loss caused by the reduction of those who came in as visitors by boat, rail and aeroplane; in other words, an apparent loss of $23,000,000.

Need Improvement

Roads in Western Canada are not as good as they might be and probably would be if the provincial governments had the money to spend to put them in first class condition. On account of economic conditions they have necessarily been allowed to deteriorate and their condition has not been improved by a substantial increase in the past two or three years of heavy truck traffic.

Before these conditions are likely to be remedied and the highways put in a condition that will make them attractive to visitors from a country where good roads are the rule rather than the exception, it looks as if substantial sums of money will have to be expended and possibly further restrictions imposed on commercial trucks using the highways.

Taking into consideration the financial handicaps under which the provinces are laboring and the fact that the tourist industry is, or should be, a national asset, it would appear to be quite in order to suggest that further assistance might well be given by the federal government to the west to enable the provinces to embark on a more vigorous highway rehabilitation program than is now possible. It would seem conceivable that it would be money well expended and in time would pay dividends not only to the provinces themselves but the country as a whole.

Then, too, it should not be overlooked that such work could be planned and devised to furnish employment and wages for a large number of men now idle and who are now being sustained by the country without any return for their upkeep.

The importance of the tourist industry is well summed up by Claude C. Bonter in a recent issue of "Canadian Business" when he says:

"It may be unequivocally stated that revenues accruing to a country from tourist traffic represent net gains in the country's wealth. They constitute the great invisible balance of trade. Unlike other forms of trade, the tourist industry produces a dollar which is exchanged only for accommodation and services, rather than for exportable material. The country, in other words gains a dollar and loses nothing."

Early Explorers

Finds Indisputable Evidence That Norsemen Visited Canada

Prof. T. F. McIlwraith of the University of Toronto and the Royal Ontario Museum told the Ontario Historical Association that finds made in the Lake Nipigon district in recent years were indisputable evidence that Canada was visited by Norsemen 1,000 years ago. Prof. McIlwraith told the closing session of the society's convention that a sword, part of a shield handle and an axe-head, turned over to the museum by the Port Arthur man who found them, undoubtedly were of the 10th century.

For millions of years the world's early birds had teeth.

Tossed A Coin

How Two Scotsmen Decided On Their Holdings In Quebec

Two hundred years after Jacques Cartier's return to France, two Scotsmen stood on the shores of La Malbaie river in Quebec and tossed a coin to determine who would take the east side and who the west side of the domain. Both had served during the conquest under General Murray who granted them crown land at this location.

As a result of the toss, the east side fell to Malcolm Fraser and he named it Mount Murray in honor of his distinguished general. The west side came under the jurisdiction of John Nairne who also honored his general by calling it Murray bay. It is interesting to note that on Nairne's property is to-day one of Canada's most popular vacation resorts, the historic Manoir Richelieu.

Vegetable Origins

They Come To Us As A Heritage From The Whole World
A few common beans once brought a price of $1,000, although $5,000 would have been paid for them by the famous Burpee. They were for what is now known as the bush bean plant, which at that time had grown as a climber on poles. An article in the Saturday Evening Post gives considerable history of how many of the finest products of the vegetable garden have been discovered.

Few people realize that the vegetable plot, however small, is a heritage from the whole world; corn, beans and squash were first cultivated for it by the ancient cliff dwellers of the Southwest; your onions came from Palestine; your asparagus from Siberia; North Europe gave you cabbage, broccoli, cauliflower; the melons came from Peru; your watermelons from Persia; your lettuce from Africa; beets and carrots are native to South Europe; your peas came from Egypt and your lettuce from China. It passes understanding how these plant immigrants from so many climes adapt themselves to a land so different in soil, climate, latitude and altitude as undersea Imperial Valley, sea-level New Jersey, mile-high Colorado, tropical Florida and Northern Ontario.

As the writer concludes: "They don't always do it willingly, and that's why, on the seedmen's farms, the watchword is cross, backcross and doublecross."

Risk of Food Shortage

Urges Britain To Buy Supplies Of Wheat From Canada

Sir Herbert Matthews, member of the Great War food ministry, told the congress of industrial transport that the United Kingdom runs a grave risk of food shortage at the outbreak of another war than in 1914.

The government food defence committee has no food to control and no means of distributing it if they possessed it, he charged.

The wartime minister said that if the government were alive to its responsibilities, it would make large purchases of Canadian wheat immediately.

"We have a large capacity for oil," Sir Herbert said, "but in the most vulnerable positions. Like the supplies of wheat, this oil should be spread over the country so that it might be readily available in times of emergency."

"Taking all things into consideration, this country is in a far worse position as regards its food supply than in 1914. The population is much larger, the number of merchant ships is much smaller, the land is in poor, half-starved condition and the number of farm workers has been largely reduced."

Old Moore's Almanac

Prophecy Of What Might Happen In Europe This Fall

Prime Minister Chamberlain advised people who want to know what's going to happen in Europe this fall to look it up in Old Moore's almanac, an annual publication popular in England. Mr. Chamberlain was addressing a Conservative party rally at Cardiff, Wales.

"Old Moore's is as likely to be right as I," he added.

And here is what Old Moore says: "In the first half of September there are signs of much tension in Berlin to be followed by calm in the latter half . . ."

"In October foreign affairs will continue to be of supreme importance inasmuch as Venus is culminating at both Rome and Berlin.

"There is good ground for anticipating that the cause of peace will make further great headway, for conditions are, certainly most propitious for a real and lasting understanding on a very wide and comprehensive scale . . ."

Charge Account For Dog

L. P. Tyndall, Kingston, N.C., says if his dog, Rover, "wasn't reasonable, I wouldn't let him have a charge account, but he has never been a glutton." When Rover is hungry he goes to a butcher and barks his choice before a display case. It used to be beef every time, but now he often has a tooth for frankfurters and hamburgers.

Made Transfer Easy

How Wealthy German Got £60,000 In Stocks To England

Where there's a will there's a way. Listen to this story which is going round knowledgeable circles in London of the successful efforts of a wealthy German, now in London, to transfer £60,000 to England by an astute move.

A short time ago a friend of London solicitors received a letter from a German industrialist, asking one of his partners to visit him in Berlin. The expenses of the journey were to be amply defrayed. The solicitor duly arrived and after dinner was asked by the German to look through a number of English stock certificates that he had had before the Nazi regime, under which it was impossible to bring them to England. The London solicitor duly examined the certificates and made a note of them. The German then said: "Will you be so kind as to watch me carefully while I put each of these certificates in the fire?" He did so. Next day the solicitor returned to London, followed a few days later by his client, who did not even bring with him so much as an attache case. In London, at the German's request, the solicitor filed an affidavit proving the destruction of the stock certificates, and, after the necessary lapse of six months, new certificates were issued. The German thus found himself again in possession of his £60,000 but in London!—Overseas Daily Mail.

The Escort Ships

Glasgow And Southampton Do Not Rank With Battle-Cruisers

The two cruisers that escorted the King and Queen on their return voyage in the Empress of Britain are splendid, modern vessels, the Arethusa and the Glasgow, commissioned in 1933 and 1934, respectively.

The cruisers are sister vessels of 9,100 tons with a complement of 700 men. They are armed with 12 6-inch guns and eight 4-inch guns, carry two airplanes and can speed 33 knots an hour. They are oil driven. They are not capital ships and do not rank with battle-cruisers or battleships.

During the Great War a light British cruiser called the Glasgow escaped from the disastrous battle of Coronel with the German Von Spee squadron in which two heavy British cruisers were sunk. The Glasgow joined forces with two British battle-cruisers and at the battle of the Falkland Islands a few weeks later destroyed a German light cruiser. The German squadron was wiped out. The Admiralty always will keep the name Glasgow well represented in the British navy.—Toronto Star.

Books Written By Women

Collector Hopes To Have Every Country In World Represented
Grace Thompson Seton, one-time big game hunter and explorer, is using an interlude and her worldwide friendships with women to hunt out books written by women.

Her goal is to complete for the National Council of Women, of which she is chairman, of the committee of letters, a collection of books by women in which every country in the world will be represented. The collection will be known as the Biblioteca Femina and will not only cover the range of women's particular interests but will contain science, sociology, art and travel treatises.

Canada will be well represented in this unique library as Mrs. Seton has a special kinship with the Dominion. She is the former wife of Ernest Thompson Seton, one-time naturalist to the Government of Manitoba. It is likely one of her own works, "A Woman Tenderfoot in the Rockies," will find a place on the shelves of the Biblioteca Femina.

Her organization for the library has a world-wide base, she said.

Every country has its chairman of letters on whom she relies for a selection of its representative women writers.

From the data she has collected, Mrs. Seton says she has discovered that "whereas the position of women in Europe is declining under the totalitarian governments, it is steadily rising in the Orient." Chinese women particularly, she said, continue to absorb the "eye-opening learning" of the Occident and have come out from the "orchid doors" into the world of business, education and medicine—and now even into the auxiliary army corps.

Long Range Field Gun

U.S. Gun Throws A 100-Pound Shell For 15 Miles

The United States army lifted secrecy from its newest and longest range field gun, a weapon that hurl's a 100-pound shell 15 miles.

A 155-millimetre calibre gun, bulky but mobile, it fired a projectile in tests at Fort Bragg, N.C., which travelled about 25,000 yards and blew a hole 16 feet in the ground.

The shot was the longest ever fired from a standard American army field gun, Colonel Ralph M.C. Pennell, chairman of the Field Artillery Board, reported.

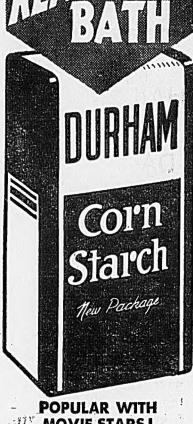

The weapon, developed by the army's own ordnance experts, has been adopted as standard for long range artillery fire and an undisclosed number are being turned out now at arsenals.

Describing it in the military periodical, "Army Ordnance," Pennell explained its function was bombardment of enemy reserves, supply dumps and communications far behind wartime lines of battle.

The old governess stood up. "Oh, my dear! You mustn't!"

"Mustn't what, Penny? Mustn't remember? Then, why did you make me? Why did you make?" She was trembling and shaking, and the calm and cheer of the pretty room shattered into fragments. "Don't you want me to have any peace?" The greyhound watched her anxiously.

"Oh, my dearie! Dear! Yes! Yes! But this isn't peace you have now, and I see where you're drifting, and there's no happiness ahead..."

"Happiness? Who's talking about happiness? Peace, I said—peace—the kind I used to have in the hospital when they gave me stuff to kill the pain instead of killing me. Then I learned to drug myself, and you want to take that away, too!" She was crying now, wildly, bitterly.

Miss Pennington put her arms round her. "Hush, poor lamb! Hush! You'll make yourself ill! Dearie, I don't want to torture you—but—oh, Sarah Lynn, why did you send him away?"

She stopped crying for a moment. "Because he wanted to go, Penny." "No, no! That's not true! He was crushed and haggard with sorrow—he was..."

"Yes. He was sorry. But I knew him, Penny. I knew what he thought about life and death. He said: 'To be alive, that is nothing, unless life is good.' And he said all and incurable and helpless people ought to be put out of the way of the well and strong. Survival of the fittest; that was what he believed in."

"No, no!" It was Miss Pennington who was weeping, now. "He didn't mean—" she was holding her, patting her. "And you're going to be well..."

Sarah Lynn pushed her away. "I knew what he thought. He'd told me over and over. Do you think I wanted his pity and his death? I wanted him to be free. I wanted him to be free, always, not even to remember me, not even to be sorry any more." She cried again, then long and bitterly, and the governess wept, her hands in helpless grief and fright. After a while Sarah Lynn said in a small, tired voice: "You'd better bathe my eyes, Penny, and powder my nose. They'll be coming home soon. And you'd better be reading Duncan's book."

Duncan Van Doren was the first to return. The dentist had given him an unpleasant afternoon and he was pale and fagged looking. He studied Sarah Lynn's face anxiously. "Sarah Lynn, aren't you feeling well? Is anything the matter? Well, then, did you—did you miss me at all?"

"Yes, I missed you a lot, Duncan," she told him gravely. "And I've been thinking a lot, too. Duncan, if I can't improve, if I'm able to walk again, and not be such a burden, if you still want me—"

"Sarah Lynn!"

"And if you'll take me away to Detroit and keep me there always, and never let me hear planes going by the sky—"

Hot color flooded his face; he was shaking and stammering. "Oh, Sarah Lynn! I'll take care of you! I'll make you happy! I'll make you happy—"

"I'll try to make you happy, too, Duncan," she said lovelily. "I'll do my best. I promise."

It was in the dawn, chilly and dark, that Miss Pennington in Mrs. Dana's discarded dressing-gown went padding across the floor to stand beside Sarah Lynn's bed.

"You're not sleeping."

"No, Penny. It doesn't matter."

"Have you pain? Do you feel the brace too much?"

"No," she said again after a pause. "I don't feel—anything."

The governess went down on her plump knees and groped for Sarah Lynn's hand. "Oh, my dear, why did you do it? Why? Why did you do it?"

It was a long moment before she spoke. "It makes Mother happier than anything else in the world; it pays Duncan back; it pays them both back."

"Ah, but you, Sarah Lynn! You!"

"It doesn't matter, Penny." She laughed. "It matters not—Remember Uncle Lynn's pipe rack? The rest of the verse is silly: master of your fate and captain of your soul. That's sentimental nonsense. But it doesn't matter how strait the gate is. Will you give me a drink of water, please, Penny?"

Miss Pennington brought it and stood waiting while she drank. Tears were running down over her bright, hard cheeks and the tip of her nose was red.

"Thank you, Penny dear," Sarah Lynn said clearly, handing back the glass. "And there's one other reason, Gunnar. If ever he hears—and he will hear, sometime, through Uncle Lynn or Conrad Jordan or Sally Ann—with think everything is all right. You see, Penny, I want him to be free, always, the way I knew him. I don't want him to have one thought that's remorseful or sorry. I want him to forget all about me, but I ever do come into his mind I want him to think: 'So she married the first suitor! She lives the soft life, safe and dull. It is finished.' And I'm going to get him, too, Penny. I'm going to—"

She broke off with a muffled cry and put her hands over her ears. Miss Pennington stood listening. There was the throbbing of a motor far above them.

they might talk without Sarah Lynn's leaving the car. Mrs. Dana did most of the chatting. Then they went to see dear Aunt Helens where Duncan met them for tea.

Sally Ann came back but she stayed in San Francisco and came down for a day or two at a time, once a month.

Lynn Dana had her for luncheon with Mary Dana Webster and Conrad Jordan.

"What do you hear from Gunnar?" the traveling cousin asked the fler once.

"Nothing."

Sally Ann stared. "He never writes, and I don't. I had a brief and very formal note from Gunnar after he left."

"Then he doesn't know about Sarah Lynn's recovery?"

"Not from me. He clearly wanted to make a clean break. What point would there be in telling him now? She's going to marry Van Doren."

"Besides," Mary Dana Webster said crisply, "to rush back now when she's well, after bolting when it seemed hopeless, wouldn't be very handsome, would it?"

Gunnar Thorwald's only defender was silent.

Sally Ann said: "I've got to New York in a week or so. I've seen Sarah Lynn, and that's what I came home for. I've seen her four times—and I haven't seen her at all. Duncan was there, Cousin Adelaide, but even if I'd had alone I doubt if I could have punctured that—"

She stopped. "That's what Gunnar Thorwald's only defender was silent.

"The story of tea, itself, is an interesting study. Romance and history have been a part of it since it was first introduced to the Western world. With its introduction late in the seventeenth century, a great change was brought about in our social customs which had continued to this day."

At first tea was considered as a simple, exotic drug, but even after it was accepted as a beverage, the price prohibited other than the wealthy families from indulging in its use, writes Alice R. Rollins in the Los Angeles Times.

Every admiral has his "barge," too, for taking him from ship to shore and from ship to shore and back. It is really a steam packet small enough to be carried aboard but large enough to carry 30 or 40 men. That was the kind of "barge" their Majesties were to have used but the water was too rough for such a small vessel.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Hon. Dr. Cross and G. L.

MacLachlan Held Social Credit Meeting would control monetary policy and it would be possible to rapidly increase the bonus till it equalled the dividend promised in 1935

He went on to point out

A public meeting was held that the expenses of the Treasury in the hall of Chinook hotel, were to be financed by: Minister of Health and G. L. I. Savings effected in mass MacLachlan M. L. A. chair, buying to be carried on by man of the Social Credit Board the joint operation of the Marketing Board and Treasury Branches. In the field of general economic situation money in circulation equalled 35 per cent was considerably anticipated.

2. Commissions from manufacturers of goods science had made it possible for us to produce and the condition of unemployed were put back to poverty in the midst of plenty work would continue. He went on to show that in spite of the promises of the Dominion Government to "issue currency and credit in terms of public need" and their undeniable power to do so they had refused to take action and also by disallowing Provincial legislation prevented Alberta from taking action and so the resultant crimes of unemployment and relief could be justly laid at their door. He urged the gathering to give careful consideration to the proposals of the New Democracy Movement lead by Mr. Herdige.

Mr MacLachlan dealt with the operation of the Government Treasury branches and Agencies. He pointed out that these institutions were really the peoples co-operative financial institutions. He showed that the use of these facilities would:

1 Increase immediately the purchasing power of the user by three cents on every dollar
2 Cause a rapid increase of the production and use of Alberta manufactured goods with a resultant increase in the employment of Alberta labor.

3 Make it possible for the people through co-operation to control their own financial policy and by so doing to bring about economic reform in Alberta

Mr. MacLachlan went on to show that when 50 per cent of the business of the Province was done through the Treasury Branches the people
